

Rehan Haidry

Consultant Gastroenterologist

London

With practicing privileges at leading private hospitals in London, Dr Rehan Haidry is an expert Consultant Gastroenterologist specialising in treating and managing a range of gastrointestinal disorders. He is based at The London Gastroenterology Centre.

Dr Rehan Haidry is a Consultant Gastroenterologist and Interventional Endoscopist at University College Hospital in London, and also consults privately at The London Gastroenterology Centre on Welbeck Street. He is an expert in his field, specialising in upper gastrointestinal disorders such as gastro-oesophageal reflux, Barrett's oesophagus, irritable bowel syndrome and gastrointestinal cancers, as well as being an expert in diagnostic and therapeutic endoscopy and colonoscopy.

Dr Haidry obtained his primary medical qualification from the University of London in 2001. He then went on to complete his comprehensive medical training at St Mary's Hospital in London, followed by advanced Gastroenterology training in North East London.

Following this, Dr Haidry embarked on a two-year research fellowship at UCLH in novel diagnostic and therapeutic modalities in the upper gastrointestinal tract including endoscopic treatment of Barrett's Oesophagus and early cancers under the supervision of Professor Lovat.

He was then appointed Consultant Gastroenterologist at the University College Hospital in London where he currently leads the Upper GI interventional endoscopic unit and is the director of endoscopy in the gastroenterology division.

Understanding that no two patients are the same, Dr Haidry performs a comprehensive assessment, carefully choosing each test to ensure an accurate diagnosis. He recognises what a daunting experience this can be and therefore explains all the treatments options available to you to prepare a personalised treatment plan.

He continually strives to deliver the highest standards of care to each patient, whether private or NHS, to ensure each patient receives the best possible outcome, together with warm and friendly care.
