Dr Rubeta Matin is a renowned consultant dermatologist at Oxford University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust and the Devonshire Clinic, Devonshire Street, London. She offers expert services in general dermatology, skin cancer, skin disease in the immunosuppressed, and oral/vulval skin disease. Dr Matin holds a special academic interest in cutaneous oncology and skin disease in the immunosuppressed.

Dr Matin received her medical degree from the world-class medical institutes of Guy's, King's and St Thomas' Hospitals Medical School and the University of London in 2001. During this time, she achieved a First Class degree in Biochemistry with Basic Medical Sciences BSc (Hons). Dr Matin then proceeded to continue her medical training at University Hospitals Southampton. At this esteemed institute, she achieved membership of the Royal College of Physicians in 2004. Following this, Dr Matin moved on to the Oxford Deanery, where she completed her specialist training in dermatology.

Currently, Dr Matin leads a specialist transplant/immunosuppressed clinic at Oxford University Hospitals NHS Trust. She also provides a dermatology service to the Bone Marrow Transplant Clinic, a clinic that is unique in the UK. Dr Matin furthers her academic interests in cutaneous oncology by regularly working closely with industry leading haematologists and oncologists.

The expertise that Dr Matin has obtained is shared both locally in Oxford and nationally, as she actively mentors dermatology trainees to undertake high-quality clinical research and to develop clinical trials in skin cancer.

Her internationally regarded work has been published in high impact peer reviewed journals, and has been presented both nationally and internationally.

She is an honorary senior clinical lecturer at Oxford University, and regularly is involved in undertaking medical student teaching as an associate clinical tutor for dermatology. As an examiner for the final MB, Dr Matin is actively involved in developing the curriculum and assessments in dermatology.
