Mr Shyamalan is a leading hand and wrist surgeon based in the West Midlands. He specialises in minimally invasive hand and wrist surgery, offering expert diagnosis and treatment for a variety of chronic and traumatic conditions including sports injuries, wrist arthritis and scaphoid fractures.

Mr Shyamalan is a leading hand surgeon and wrist surgeon based in Birmingham and Solihull in the West Midlands. He is a top hand surgeon in the UK and is a director of The Midland Hand Clinic which is based at numerous private hospitals. He specialises in minimally invasive hand surgery and wrist surgery, offering expert diagnosis and treatment for a variety of chronic and traumatic conditions including sports injuries, wrist arthritis and scaphoid fractures.

Mr Shyamalan gained his Bachelor of Medicine from the Royal Free Hospital School of Medicine. He then went on to complete his General Orthopaedic training on the South West Thames Rotation.

Since qualifying he has had the privilege of working with a variety of world-renowned experts, and was able to take his Hand and Plastics fellowship at a number of first-rate units around the world including Ganga Hospital in India, Royal North Shore Hospital in Australia and The Chelsea and Westminster Hospital in London. During this time, he developed extensive expertise in complex nerve procedures, paediatric hand problems, soft tissue hand trauma, arthritis and wrist arthroscopy, becoming a hand specialist.
