Based at his own private practice at 116 Harley Street, Mr Dan Plev is an experienced neurosurgeon and spinal specialist. Offering minimal invasive motion preservation, Mr Plev practices surgical and non-surgical treatment for the full range of spinal problems including degenerative spinal conditions, osteoporosis, spinal tumours and trauma to the spine.

Mr Dan V. Plev, MD, FANCH, graduated from Mainz University and trained in Phoenix, AZ, USA and Munich, Germany where he completed his German neurosurgical training.

He was awarded an MD for his experimental immunohistological work on proliferation markers in gliomas and meningiomas. During his training he gained considerable experience in treating spinal disorders ranging from degenerative conditions to tumour work.

After moving to London, Mr Plev worked as the Spinal Fellow at the London Spine Clinic for eighteen months, greatly increasing his exposure to and experience of treating spinal conditions. Mr Plev has adopted the Clinic's philosophy of managing patients in a holistic manner, utilising the least invasive therapeutic measures when possible, to improve symptoms.

He treats pathologies of the entire spine (cervical, thoracic, lumbar), degenerative and traumatic conditions of the spine, tumours, and is now a leading surgeon in kyphoplastic cement augmentation for fractures, endoscopic discectomies and nucleoplasties and teaches regularly around the world.

Mr Plev has affiliations to The London Clinic and King's College Hospital, London. A guest lecturer at international neurosurgical and spinal conferences, he also plays an active role in faculty hands-on teaching courses and is involved in various patient support organisations, including the Artificial Disc Replacement Support Group.
