

Feroz Dinah

Consultant Hip and Knee Surgeon
Surrey and London

Mr Feroz Dinah is a Consultant Orthopaedic Surgeon at Epsom and St Helier Hospitals NHS Trust, where he specialises in lower limb surgery. Skilled in the latest surgical techniques and committed to providing personalised holistic care, he provides private treatment for hip pain and knee problems such as ligament damage, patellar instability, cartilage and meniscus injuries and arthritis at a number of hospitals in Surrey and South West London.

Mr Feroz Dinah qualified from the Royal London and St Bartholomew's Hospital in 1996. He undertook his postgraduate training at hospitals in London, Surrey and Sussex, during which time he also studied for the award of the Diploma in Sports and Exercise Medicine (UK). Mr Feroz completed his training with a year-long fellowship in orthopaedic biomechanics and bioengineering at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, USA and a year as a specialist knee fellow in the UK, which also involved an exposure to primary hip replacement.

Following a locum Orthopaedic Consultant post at Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge in 2009, Mr Feroz was appointed as a substantive Consultant Orthopaedic Surgeon at Epsom and St Helier Hospitals NHS Trust in 2010, where he provides a general orthopaedic trauma service (St Helier Hospital) and a specialist lower limb elective service (Epsom General Hospital and SWLEOC).

A firm believer in a multidisciplinary approach, Mr Dinah works with allied professionals in both his NHS and private practice to deliver personalised, holistic care tailor-made to need of the individual.
