Located in Glasgow, expert Consultant ENT Surgeon, Fiona MacGregor provides the latest ENT treatments to adults. She is highly skilled in treating throat problems and neck lumps.

Fiona MacGregor is a Consultant ENT Surgeon based in Glasgow. She has a particular interest in throat and voice disorders, neck lumps and head and neck cancer. She treats a wide range of general ENT problems including sore throat (including tonsillitis) and swallowing problems.

Fiona graduated from Edinburgh Medical School in 1986 and undertook her initial surgical training in Edinburgh and Glasgow. She subsequently trained in otolaryngology at the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital and Great Ormond Street Hospital for Children in London. She also worked at the Middlesex and Hammersmith Hospitals before returning to Glasgow and taking up a consultant post at Gartnavel General Hospital and the Royal Hospital for Sick Children Yorkhill in 1997. In 2015 she became a full-time adult ENT Surgeon at the new Queen Elizabeth University Hospital, Glasgow.

She is an Honorary Senior Lecturer at Glasgow University and a Royal College of Surgeons Examiner for the Intercollegiate Specialty Board in Otorhinolaryngology. She is a past Chairman of ENT Scotland and sits on ENT-UK council. She is a member of the Royal Society of Medicine, British Laryngological Association, British Voice Association and ENT UK.
