

Pat Phen

Consultant Cardiologist,
Essex

Leading Consultant Cardiologist, Dr Pat Phen offers the latest cardiology and heart disease treatment to private patients across Essex.

He undertook 3 years of clinical research at the National Heart and Lung Institute, Imperial College London and was awarded a PhD in Cardiovascular Medicine. He was appointed Consultant Cardiologist at Basildon University Hospital in 2004, where he is now the Clinical Service Unit Lead for Secondary Care Cardiology, and The Essex Cardiothoracic Centre, when it opened, in 2007.

Dr Phen's has a special interest in using advanced echocardiographic techniques in the assessment of heart valve and heart failure patients, as well as in the use of specialised pacemakers (cardiac resynchronisation therapy) to help restore proper coordination of heart muscle contraction.

He has published in peer-reviewed journals and presented to international conferences on the subject. He continues this interest in his clinical practice, which is termed preventive cardiology. Additionally, he is an investigator in a current multicentre research trial on virtual clinic follow up of patients with cardiac pacemakers via the internet.
