Internationally renowned Knee Surgeon Matt Dawson specialises in sports injuries and degenerative conditions affecting the joint. As one of the worlds leading authorities on osteotomy and joint preservation surgery, he travels the world lecturing convening international congresses on the subject.

Matt Dawson is an Internationally renowned Knee Surgeon who specialises in sports injuries and degenerative conditions affecting the joint. He is one of the Worlds leading authorities on Osteotomy and Joint Preservation surgery lecturing around the globe and convening international congresses on the subject.

He believes in the principle of joint preservation in order to prolong knee activity and function to the highest level. His philosophy is to assess patients individually with the appreciation that alignment and stability of the knee are the bedrock to successful knee function and effective surgery. This enables the patient to perform activities at the highest level for as long as possible.

Mr Dawson consults and operates privately at BMI Hospital in Lancaster and also holds private clinics in Carlisle and Whitehaven.

Having completed his specialist orthopaedic training programme at Kings College Hospital London he undertook a year long Sports Knee Fellowship in Dublin. Mr Dawson joined North Cumbria University Hospital as a Specialist Knee Surgeon in 2001.
