

Gavin Robertson

Gallstone and Hernia Surgeon

Leicester

Mr Gavin Robertson is Consultant Laparoscopic and Hepatobiliary Surgeon at Leicester General Hospital. He offers private diagnosis and treatment for gallbladder disease and abdominal wall hernias at The Leicester Nuffield Hospital and Spire Leicester Hospital.

Mr Gavin Robertson is an expert laparoscopic and hepatobiliary surgeon, based in Leicester offering expert diagnosis and treatment of gallbladder disease, and abdominal wall hernias, including laparoscopic cholecystectomy, laparoscopic hernia repair, upper GI endoscopy and endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography.

Gavin qualified in 1984 from Leicester Medical School. His extensive surgical training included 8 years as a lecturer in Leicester, where he began training in laparoscopic surgery when it began in the UK in 1993. He spent additional periods on specialist units in Birmingham, Belgium and Australia.

Involved in the technique since its inception in 1993, Mr Robertson is a highly experienced and skilled laparoscopic surgeon with specialist training from national and international units. He has a particular interest and expertise in the treatment of gallbladder disease and has performed over 4,000 laparoscopic cholecystectomies to date, with no incidence of bile duct injury. His other major interest is the repair of abdominal wall hernias laparoscopically including complex incisional hernias as well as inguinal, umbilical and ventral hernias (over 4500).

He has been on the Council of the Association of Laparoscopic Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland, and an instructor for advanced laparoscopic surgery and laparoscopic cholecystectomy at The Royal College of Surgeons of England.

He has over 60 original publications and book chapters covering the management of gallstones and repair of hernias.
