Mr Jonathan M Wilson is a highly trained laparoscopic gastrointestinal surgeon and general surgeon based in London, specialising in minimally invasive surgery for gallbladder removal and conditions affecting the large bowel.

Jonathan M Wilson is a highly trained general surgeon based in London specialising in laparoscopic surgery for hernia repair, gallbladder removal and conditions affecting the bowel, as well as the latest minimally invasive techniques to treat haemorrhoids and pilonidal disease.

Jonathan Wilson is Consultant Laparoscopic Colorectal and General Surgeon providing minimally invasive colorectal surgery to NHS patients at the Whittington Hospital, North London, and also privately at The London Clinic (116 Harley Street), The Wellington Hospital Platinum Centre and Highgate Hospital. He is also able to offer private laparoscopic general surgery at The London Clinic, the Wellington Hospital and Highgate Hospital in London.

Mr Wilson qualified in medicine from Leeds University School of Medicine in 1996 and gained experience of general medicine and different branches of surgery in hospitals in Leeds, including St James' Hospital, where he was Senior House Officer in General Surgery, Orthopaedic Surgery and Plastic Surgery. In 2001, he was awarded an MRC Clinical Research Fellowship to study the role of macrophage migration inhibitory factor for which he was awarded a PhD by the University of Leeds.

Mr Wilson moved to London, spending the next four years gaining further surgical experience at hospitals in and around the capital. He first specialised in colorectal surgery and general surgery in 2007 and in 2009 was fortunate enough to work as a Colorectal Fellow at University College London Hospital, a busy tertiary referral colorectal unit with an international reputation.

He won a prestigious appointment as Resident Surgical Officer at St Mark's Hospital, Harrow, a world-famous tertiary referral centre specialising in colorectal disease. Here he specialised in complex colorectal surgery, including specialised laparoscopic colorectal techniques. In 2010 Mr Wilson won an ACPGIB Laparoscopic Colorectal Fellowship to further extend his skills in minimally invasive colorectal and general surgery.
