Based in Manchester, Mr Padmanabh Phaltankar is a highly experienced Consultant Orthopaedic Surgeon with a specialist interest in knee surgery, hip surgery and treatment of knee sports injuries. He is skilled in arthroscopic knee surgery, including knee ligament reconstruction and torn cartilage repair, and provides a full range of joint replacement procedures for the hip and knee, including those suitable for the younger patient.

Mr Phaltankar MBBS, MS(Orth), D Ortho, FRCS, FRCS (Trauma & Orth) is a Consultant Orthopaedic Knee and Hip Surgeon in Greater Manchester region. He offers private treatment for knee and hip conditions at a number of leading independent private hospitals in the Greater Manchester area.

Mr Padmanabh Phaltankar qualified from the University of Mumbai, India in 1992. His postgraduate orthopaedic training was at the King Edward Memorial Hospital in Mumbai. He trained as a specialist registrar at St George's Hospital, London as well as other hospitals in Surrey and West Sussex, gaining expertise in knee and hip replacement surgery. His training was completed with knee fellowships at the Freeman Hospital in Newcastle upon Tyne and at the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. The fellowships provided him with extensive training in all aspects of knee surgery, with a particular focus on anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction and sports injury of the knee.

Mr Phaltankar has worked as a specialist knee and hip surgeon in Manchester since 2005 and holds an NHS consultant post at the Pennine Acute Hospitals NHS Trust. He undertakes a large number of surgical procedures related to the knee and hip, both in his NHS and private practice.
