Mr Prasad Kothari is an experienced consultant ENT surgeon and expert in head and neck cancer. Within his private practice, covering Hertfordshire and Middlesex, he provides treatments for general ENT conditions and expert management of cancers affecting the head, neck, thyroid and salivary glands.

Mr Prasad Kothari is Consultant ENT and Head and Neck Surgeon at Luton and Dunstable NHS Foundation Trust and Lister Hospital Stevenage. He provides a general ENT service, but has a special expertise in head and neck cancer, and is a team member of the Mount Vernon Cancer Network.

Mr Kothari has dual qualifications in Dentistry and Medicine and post graduate qualifications in Oral surgery and ENT. His ENT and Head and Neck training was in London including the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital and he received his specialist cancer surgery training from various units in London, India and Holland.

Mr Kothari has published articles in a number of international journals and has presented at many national and international meetings. He also teaches on a number of national training courses.

Mr Kothari has a special interest in benign and malignant disorders of the head and neck, including the thyroid gland and salivary glands. He offers truly multi-disciplinary treatment for all head and neck cancers, working closely with radiotherapists, oncologists and the MacMillan team to discuss all patients, before commencing treatment.

Working with consultants from other specialties, Mr Kothari provides comprehensive investigations and treatment for snoring and sleep apnoea. He is also interested in treating swallowing disorders and works closely with speech and language therapists to investigate and treat these problems.
