

Ewen Griffiths

Consultant Upper GI Surgeon
Birmingham

Mr Ewen Griffiths is a Birmingham-based Upper GI Surgeon specialising in general surgery, upper gastrointestinal surgery and diagnostic and therapeutic upper gastrointestinal endoscopy. He offers both keyhole and traditional surgery for conditions such as hernias, reflux disease, gallbladder disease, oesophageal and gastric cancer and achalasia.

Mr Ewen Griffiths is Consultant General and Upper Gastrointestinal Surgeon at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust. He offers private assessment and treatment for a range of conditions including hernias, reflux, gallstones and swallowing difficulties at BMI Edgbaston Hospital in Birmingham.

Mr Ewen Griffiths qualified in medicine from Dundee University, Scotland in 2000 and achieved Membership of the Royal College of Surgeons (Glasgow) in 2004. In 2006, he was awarded an MD from Manchester University for his work on 'hypoxia associated factors' in oesophagogastric cancer carried out at the Paterson Institute of Cancer Research, research that also led to many publications in leading medical journals.

Mr Griffiths undertook his higher surgical training in the North West of England, including Specialist Registrar posts in the Upper Gastrointestinal Units at Salford Royal Hospital and Royal Preston Hospital. He obtained his Fellowship of Royal College of Surgeons in 2010 and completion of specialist surgical training (CCT) in 2012. He spent a year as a Senior Upper Gastrointestinal Fellow at the Royal Adelaide Hospital, Australia where he received specialist training in the field of advanced laparoscopic surgery for reflux, giant hiatus hernias, upper GI cancer and obesity.

Mr Griffiths was appointed as a Consultant General and Upper GI Surgeon at the University Hospitals Birmingham Foundation NHS Trust in September 2012.
