Miss Kathryn McCarthy is a Bristol-based Consultant Colorectal Surgeon with a special interest in pelvic floor conditions and continence. She offers private treatment for problems such as bowel incontinence following childbirth, haemorrhoids, rectal prolapse, anal tears and complex endometriosis at Litfield House Medical Centre in Clifton.

Miss Kathryn McCarthy qualified in medicine from University College London in 1998. She undertook her higher surgical training in London and Wessex, including a year of specialist training in gynaecology at the Princess Ann Hospital in Southampton. She completed her training with a fellowship in advanced laparoscopic colorectal surgery in Glasgow.

Kathryn has been a Consultant Colorectal Surgeon at North Bristol NHS Trust since 2012, where she specialises in laparoscopic colorectal surgery, pelvic surgery and endometriosis. Since taking up her post, she has furthered her practice with another secondment into gynaecology in order to develop services for women with bowel symptoms who have experienced obstetric and sphincter injuries, those with complex endometriosis and to further the management of women who have pelvic organ prolapse affecting the bowel and vagina.

Kathryn has also established a dedicated service for patients with faecal incontinence and evacuatory disorders at North Bristol NHS Trust. She is an active member of the Bristol Pelvic Floor MDT, North Bristol Continence Group and is co-director for the Bladder and Bowel Confidence Health Integration Team, Bristol Health Partners. She is also a proctology committee member for the Association of Coloproctology of Great Britain and Ireland (Royal College of Surgeons).
