Mr Majid Hashemi is a highly experienced Harley Street based obesity surgeon offering a range of weight loss procedures including laparoscopic gastric bypass, gastric banding and sleeve gastrectomy. With a specialist expertise in upper GI surgery, he also offers expert treatment for conditions such as gastro-oesophageal reflux, hiatus hernia, abdominal hernias, achalasia and gallstones.

Mr Hashemi is a Consultant Surgeon and Honorary Senior Lecturer at University College London Hospitals. With over 24 years' experience in the field of Upper Gastrointestinal and Bariatric Surgery, he provides private weight loss surgery and treatment for gastric and oesophageal conditions at the Hospital of St John & St Elizabeth in North London. He is primarily based at 9 Harley Street, and regularly works with embassies.

Mr Majid Hashemi qualified as a doctor from Manchester University and undertook his training in London and at hospitals in East Anglia, including Addenbrooke's Hospital in Cambridge. A 15-month Oesophageal Fellowship at Dr Tom DeMeester's department at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, USA, developed his interest and expertise in the role of oesophageal function in health and disease, as well as the diagnostic and therapeutic options for reflux disease.

Mr Hashemi was appointed as Senior Lecturer at University College London and Consultant Surgeon at the Whittington Hospital in 2001. During this time he established and led the bariatric surgery service in North London and developed an innovative multidisciplinary team (MDT) approach, helping patients to make treatment decisions based on input from specialists from a range of related disciplines.

Since 2007, Mr Majid has been Lead for Oesophageal and Gastric Surgery and Oesophageal and Gastric Cancer at University College Hospital, where, in addition to surgery for obesity and oesophageal reflux or motility problems, he performs major oesophageal and gastric resections as part of UCLH's Cancer Centre team.

Mr Hashemi is the Medical Chair of Action for Achalasia. In January 2020, Achalasia Action was registered as a Charitable Incorporated Organisation by the Charity Commission of England & Wales (no 1187367)
